B/G Clifton, Army Info Deputy; Col. McHugh of AF Long Range Objectives; Cdr. Shepard From Aircraft Carrier Essex Will Serve At President Kennedy's Side

PRESIDENT Kennedy, 43, has chosen three officers in their forties—two of them born outside the United States—for duty as White House aides.

Two new aides, Brig. Gen. Chester V. Clifton, 47, USA, and Col. Godfrey T. McHugh, 49, USAF, born of American parents in Canada and Belgium, respectively, have had long Washington duty. They are '54 classmates at the National War College.

The other aide and junior in rank among the three, Cdr. Tazewell T. Shepard, jr., USN, 40 on 22 January, a native of Mobile Ala., is the son-in-law of Senator John Sparkman (D-Ala.).

Here's a rundown on the new White House aides:

Retired Travel Change Is Asked

TO help retired members of the Armed Forces get settled into their new homes, the Pentagon has asked Congress to ease present rules for transportation of dependents, baggage and household effects.

The proposed law would make two changes in current travel regulations:

Sea Services Slate 15,700 Boosts In '62

ALMOST 15,700 Navy and Marine Corps officers will win promotion during fiscal 1962, including 73 to general and flag officer ranks.

Detailed promotion plans for the two Services have been outlined to the House and Senate Armed Services Committees. The Navy will promote an estimated 12,462 officers—an increase of more than 1,000 over the planning program for the current fiscal year. The Marine Corps will promote an estimated 3,221—an increase of 421 over fiscal '61 promotion plans.

The totals include 457 Navy officers and 63 Marines who will be awarded eagles.

GENERAL TWINING'S WARNING:

New 'Complacency of Despair' Calls For Faith, NSIA Is Told

A WARNING against a new complacency—a "complacency of despair"—was sounded 26 January by General Nathan F. Twining, USAF-Ret., former Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

General Twining spoke at a dinner of the National Security Industrial Association, where he was presented with the James Forrestal Memorial Award as "a distinguished American who has most effectively applied Mr. Forrestal's ideals to the concepts and requirements of national security."

"TRIPWIRE" OR FIGHTING ARMY?

What Will Kennedy Administration Do About U. S. NATO Force?

THE Kennedy Administration must decide—and soon—whether it will maintain or reduce the strength of U. S. Forces overseas. The outcome will hinge essentially on the concept of the Seventh Army's roles and missions in Europe. Former West Point Superintendent, Lt. Gen. Garrison A. Davidson is the Seventh Army C. G.

The urgent necessity for the new Administration to come to grips immediately with the overseas deployment problem is dictated by the Eisenhower Administration's proposed Fiscal '62 Defense Budget now before Congress and by 11th hour orders given to the Services by then Secretary of Defense Thomas S. Gates.

Speaking of NATO plans for the year

starting 1 July, General Eisenhower said: "Some changes in U. S. force deployments may become advisable in light of continuing studies of overall U. S. programs."

This statement came as no great surprise to the Services. In December, they had been ordered by Secretary Gates to report on a monthly basis actions which could be taken to reduce U. S. military manpower overseas without impairing combat effectiveness.

The first reports, submitted 9 January, were presented to the outgoing Administration in highly generalized terms. There were no specific proposals for any steps which could be taken to reduce strength without harming combat effectiveness.

It remains to be seen what Secretary of Defense McNamara's attitude will be toward this report requirement.

The Eisenhower Defense Budget, which calls for a spending program of $42.9 billion in Fiscal '62, millions less than proposed by the Services, is under intense study at the White House, Pentagon and Bureau of the Budget. A priority meeting about it was held during a large part of 21 January, the day

"ACTUARIALLY BANKRUPT"

Pentagon Plan To Liberalize USCOA Draws Protest Fire From Fund Monitors

THE Defense Department faces strong opposition from the USCOA Board of Actuaries in the effort to liberalize provisions of the Uniformed Services Contingency Option Act.

The Actuaries will stress that coverage must be restricted to persons who are eligible to retire after 20 years service, regardless of the type of retirement they actually receive.

A Lady General?

If a precedent set by President Harding is followed, the new White House Physician, Dr. Janet G. Travell, would be made a brigadier general or a rear admiral. See Page 12.

They will point out that during 1959 the number of deaths among disability retirees with less than 18 years' service was 77 times the normal rate.

The Actuaries will also point out that if the program were stopped now, with no further income, and benefits paid only to survivors of Service members already deceased, the system would have to pay out $3.5 million more than it has in its bank account. If the system insured only those currently on its rolls, it would have to pay out $20.1 million more than it has.

Under the present system, one member of the three-man Board of Actuaries told THE JOURNAL, the USCOA plan is "actuarially bankrupt."

The Defense Department plan to revise USCOA, which has been sent to Congress, provides coverage for personnel who retire for either length of service or disability after 18 or more years service. To secure the benefits of the plan, personnel would have to sign up for it at least three years before retirement.

The Defense Department also proposed to set up an alternate annuity program for disability retirees with less than 18 years service. These retirees would pay regular USCOA rates for

President Kennedy Alone Can Provide Pay Benefits For Men Aboard Texas Towers

PRESIDENT Kennedy must act quickly to assure sea duty pay for military people who man Texas Tower radar installations off the northeast coast of the United States.

One such tower with 27 men aboard sank in the Atlantic 85 miles southeast of New York on 15 January.

Just three days earlier on 12 January U. S. Comptroller General Joseph Campbell signed a letter to the Secretary of the Air Force forbidding foreign duty pay or sea duty pay for Texas Tower personnel.

Mr. Campbell said, however, that the President could broaden the definition of sea duty to include Texas Towers, and thus later authorize special pay for personnel assigned to them.

For more than a year the Air Force has been battling the Comptroller Gen-

Navy Urges Diving-Pay Overhaul; Asks Flat Rate; Would Save $400,000

THE Navy has asked Congress to overhaul diving-pay laws and establish a flat monthly rate of payment for all divers—from $55 to $110.

Only currently qualified divers assigned to billets designated as diving billets and performing diving duty would be eligible for diving pay. The rate of pay would vary—under regulations to be issued by the Secretary of the Navy—and would depend solely upon the particular diver's qualifications.

A master diver would receive greater pay than a first class diver, who, the Navy said, "is less qualified and who will, in general, carry out less difficult and hazardous diving assignments."

Former Navy Secretary William B. Franke, who sent the measure to Capitol Hill as one of his last official acts at the Pentagon, said the proposal will save about $400,000 annually.

Differential pay has been granted to Navy divers since 1886. In 1949, the Career Compensation Act provided for diving pay under two concepts (1) hazardous duty pay and (2) special pay for diving duty.

Those receiving hazardous duty pay include men assigned to duties involving participation in training at the Deep Sea Diving School, the Experimental Diving Unit, the two Submarine Escape Training Tanks, and in helium-oxygen diving. Officers receive $110 per month and enlisted men receive $55.

Special pay for diving duty was continued by the 1949 Act at rates ranging from $5 to $30 per month for enlisted divers not receiving hazardous duty pay. In addition, officer and enlisted divers were entitled to special pay of $5 per hour for actual salvage or repair dives in depths over 90 feet, or in lesser depths under extraordinary hazardous conditions. These rates were increased by 10% in 1955, marking the first general diving pay raise since 1928.

The Navy says that administration of hazardous duty pay for divers has been uncomplicated, but administrative procedures for special pay for diving duty are "complex, cumbersome, and fraught with opportunities for errors in administration and in judgment."

Enlisted divers not receiving hazardous duty pay are entitled to special pay up to $20 per month depending upon their diving qualifications. This special pay can be supplemented up to a total of $33 per month by special pay for dives which are compensated for at the rate of two cents per minute of total time and five cents per foot of total depth for dives over 120 feet. Officers and enlisted divers are entitled to special pay of $5.50 per hour for actual salvage or repair operations in depths over 90 feet or under extraordinary hazardous conditions in depths under 90 feet.

The Navy says the detailed records necessary to substantiate these special pays are unnecessarily burdensome, and add that some extraordinarily hazardous div-

"Scratch the contact—it's a whale."

The U. S. Navy's job of protecting us from undersea attack is never easy, and the false alarms supplied by nature make it all the more difficult. Every clue must be investigated. What proves to be a whale today, may be an enemy submarine tomorrow. Vought Aeronautics is working with the Navy now in the development of technically advanced equipment designed to detect the enemy positively and leave him no escape. New aircraft for the most efficient use of new electronic search equipment, advanced sonobuoys ... even space systems ... are under development by Aeronautics and its sister divisions. They are part of a family of new antisubmarine warfare systems which would converge from the sea, air and space to pin down the enemy sub.

Split Decision Denies Pay Justice To 'Short-Changed' Service People

AFTER a stormy legal conflict, a three-to-two decision of the U. S. Court of Claims has upheld the right of the Comptroller General to limit the jurisdiction and refuse to honor actions of boards for correction of military and naval records.

The decision will mean losses of thousands of dollars to Service personnel who through no fault of their own are paid less than they are entitled to by the Government.

In its majority opinion by Judge Whitaker, and concurred in by Judge Laramore and Chief Judge Jones, the Court ruled against Capt. Harvey Haslip, USN-Ret., and three other plaintiffs with similar claims.

Captain Haslip joined the Navy as a midshipman in 1907. He retired for physical disability in 1925, was recalled to active duty in 1941 and re-retired in 1946. Prior to his second retirement, he was paid the active duty pay and allowances of a captain with over 30 years service.

After his 1946 retirement, his retired pay was substantially less than a 30-year-service captain because Navy fiscal authorities failed to give him and many other officers the benefit of the Pay Readjustment Act of 1942, which grants the maximum 75% retired pay for regular officers who served before 12 November 1918 and retired after the date of the act.

Reason for the Navy's refusal was that until 1956, none of the Services would treat a second retirement from active duty as a retirement for pay purposes.

After 1956, hundreds of retired Service officers asked to have their pay recomputed on the basis of their second retirement and were, like Captain Haslip, granted increased retired pay for up to 10 years by the Comptroller General.

Captain Haslip and others could not, however, get increased retired pay they were entitled to for any period beyond 10 years prior to the time they filed their claim because the statute of limitations prohibits the Comptroller General from paying such greater periods.

As a result, Captain Haslip and others went to boards for the correction of military and naval records to adjust their service pay records to show entitlement to increased retired pay from an earlier date.

The Comptroller General, alleging that correction boards can authorize additional payments only as the result of a correction of "facts," refused to allow any payment on the corrections.

The majority decision of the Court of Claims backs the Comptroller. It states, however, "Of course the plaintiff is justly entitled to what he asks for but no more so than thousands of other claimants who have not asserted their rights in time and allowed the statute of limitations to run against them."

In a strongly worded dissenting opinion, Judge Madden charged that the new decision would mean "that if a soldier's date of enlistment, reenlistment, rank, combat history and all other items material to his pay rate were correct, but because of a mistake or inadvertence of mathematics, or a mistake in the application of a law, he was not paid the amount to which the law entitled him, a correction board could not give him relief."

"He could get relief in this court, if he would go to the trouble and expense of litigation, and would act within six years," Judge Madden said. "He could, at similar trouble and expense, go to the General Accounting Office, if he did it within 10 years. But to his own department of the armed services, he could not go at all, if the appropriation relevant to the time in question had expired. . . ."

"Congress in 1946 authorized the creation of the Correction Boards in order to enable the services to correct their own errors. There is not the slightest intimation in the statute or in its legislative history that Congress intended to draw some fine line between mistakes

ing cannot be compensated for adequately by payment of $5.50 per hour because it is not actual salvage or repair work.

Under the proposed overhaul, the Secretary of the Navy would be authorized to issue regulations establishing varying amounts of special pay for different categories of divers. The rates would vary from $55 to $110 per month, and only currently qualified divers assigned to billets designated as diving billets and performing diving duty would be eligible for special diving pay. The flat rate to be paid a particular diver would depend solely upon his current qualification as a diver.

Divers assigned to duty at a submarine escape training tank, duty at the Navy Deep Sea Diving School or the Navy Experimental Diving Unit, and those assigned to duties involving the use of helium-oxygen would receive special pay for diving duty instead of the hazardous duty pay which they now receive. Divers designated as qualified in underwater demolition team or explosive ordnance disposal work, who are assigned to or are performing such duty in a billet within the authorized allowance of an underwater demolition team or an explosive ordnance disposal unit, also would be paid special pay for diving. Others so qualified and performing that duty, whether or not divers, would be paid incentive pay.

In no case could a man receive both incentive pay and special pay for diving. The Navy said the simplified flat-rate system "would enhance efficiency, morale, equity and long-term incentive."

'COPTER WORK SALUTED:

Army Aviation School Wins Bell Award
From Aerospace Sciences Institute

The Institute of the Aerospace Sciences has honored the Combat Developments Office of the Army Aviation School, Ft. Rucker, Ala., for outstanding work in the field of helicopter development.

The coveted Grover E. Bell Award was accepted by Maj. Gen. Ernest F. Easterbrook, Commander of the Army Aviation Center and Commandant of the School, during IAS Honors Night Dinner during the annual meeting in New York City this week.

The basic idea of placing weapons on helicopters goes back as early as 1944, but General Easterbrook and his staff helped bring it to reality.

The troop-carrying, light-transport helicopters deliver their men to the battlefield, furnishing effective firepower on the spot. One light-transport helicopter, equipped with rockets and machine guns, can deliver a barrage of fire-power in a few seconds, equal to a 24-gun volley of 105 Howitzers.

The Bell Award, which was established by the late Lawrence D. Bell, founder of Bell Aircraft Corp., in honor of his brother, includes $250 in cash, a medal, and certificate.

The IAS, the free world's most distinguished aerospace society, cited the Ft. Rucker Office for the development of the helicopter as a reconnaissance and suppressive vehicle, and for "significantly increasing the helicopter's effectiveness."

The Institute, founded in 1932, is a non-profit professional organization that is devoted to the dissemination of scientific and technical information and to the encouragement and recognition of advances across the whole spectrum of aero-astronautics.

Marines Ask Shift Of Supply Officers To Unrestricted Category

THE Marine Corps again has asked Congress for authority to reassign its 402 supply duty officers to the unrestricted line.

The proposal, sent to the House and Senate by out-going Secretary of the Navy William B. Franke, first went to Capitol Hill last spring (THE JOURNAL 14 May) but was not introduced.

Its purpose is to improve the combat effectiveness of the Marine Corps by providing for the expanded assignment of those officers whose skills lie primarily in the supply field.

Current Marine Corps supply functions, in support of the Marine Corps combat structure, are such as to require the assignment of officers with a broad background of command and staff experience in the combat/combat support fields, the Navy said. Under current conditions, officers designated for supply duty are restricted in their assignments to supply duties only. As a consequence, they are not afforded the opportunity for the wider range of assignments considered necessary to more closely integrate supply functions within the combat structure of the Marine Corps.

The proposed legislation would authorize the transfer to the unrestricted officer category of all officers now designated for supply duty, except the present Quartermaster General. The numbers and grades of Regular Marine Corps officers who would be affected by the proposal, as of 31 December 1959, includes the Quartermaster General, five brigadier generals, 35 colonels, 86 lieutenant colonels, 122 majors and 153 captains. No Reserve officers are designated for supply duty.

Former Secretary Franke said "Today's Marine Corps demands competent career officers possessing cumulative special knowledge and experience to fill staff and command billets in such service support areas as supply management, financial management, logistics planning, and Marine Corps Base operations, as well as billets covering the broader aspects of these fields, as encountered on joint staff level. Conversely, there is an ever-increasing requirement for present unrestricted officers to have a more thorough knowledge of supply, fiscal, and other service support functions."

He said "This situation presents a requirement for eliminating the restricted status of present supply duty officers and the substitution of assignment procedures which will provide greater flexibility of assignments for both the present supply duty officer population and the unrestricted officers. The existence of a relatively small group of supply duty officers, restricted both as to number and range of assignments, does not provide the Corps with the desired flexibility of assignments and career development."

Here is how the Marine Corps said it expects to employ the officers both immediately after reassignment and in the future:

The degree to which reassigned officers could expect their duty assignments to be expanded depends upon their individual background and their length of service as supply duty officers. The more senior officers, by virtue of a continuous career in management type assignments are surely qualified to hold a wider variety of billets, both command and staff, than is now normal under existing practice. Therefore, their assignment would be based on individual qualifications.

In addition, until increased number of unrestricted officers gain experience in service support functions, there will not be available sufficient qualified unrestricted officers to rotate into the billets now filled by officers designated for supply duty. Therefore, almost all officers now serving in the grade of colonel could expect their assignments to continue in much the same pattern as they would expect under present law, but with the opportunity of wider variation in billet assignments. Their opportunity to attain general officer grade would remain substantially unchanged.

The future careers of officer now serving in the grade of lieutenant colonel would undergo a greater degree of variation from the present pattern because of the greater amount of time available, the greater degree of flexibility that is possible in the assignment of officers in grades below colonel, and the expanded billet requirements in the service support area. The present lieutenant colonels would be fully protected by the proposed legislation into the grade of colonel.

Officers now serving in the grades of major and captain could expect the greatest deviation from the present career pattern for officers designated for supply duty. These officers have many years yet to serve in their normal careers and will have ample opportunity, by normal career progression and assignment to a wider range of duties, to gain the broad experience desired in a Marine Corps officer.

There is a provision in the legislation which permits the recently appointed Quartermaster General to complete his appointed term of four years in that office before reappointment and reassignment as an unrestricted major general. Upon completion of his term, he may be reappointed as a major general not restricted in the performance of duty, and his date of rank in that grade would be the same as his date of rank as a brigadier general.

ASROC Operational With Pacific Fleet

The Navy's newest antisubmarine weapon, ASROC (antisubmarine rocket), became operational in the Pacific Fleet 20 January, when it was fired by the guided missile frigate Mahan (DLG-11), operating 50 miles off San Diego.

Radm, Robert T. S. Keith, Commander Pacific Fleet Cruiser-Destroyer Force, termed ASROC as an important step in solving the problems confronting destroyers in combating submarines.

ASROC is an integrated system consisting of four major parts: (1) SONAR underwater detection equipment; (2) fire-control computer; (3) a launcher holding eight missiles; and (4) the missiles themselves.

With ASROC, destroyers no longer must close to within a few hundred yards of an enemy submarine before launching an attack.

The Mahan and a sister ship, the (DLG-10), joined the Pacific Fleet 14 January.

A Pentagon fiscal authority and recently a key staff member of the Senate Space Committee, Max Lehrer has been named Director, Defense Business Development, Defense Electronic Products, Radio Corporation of America.

The announcement was made by A. L. Malcarney, Executive Vice President, RCA Defense Electronic Products.

Mr. Lehrer a WWII Army veteran, will be responsible for the strategic planning and development of new business areas for the Defense Electronic Products divisions of RCA. He will have the responsibility for recommending the activities in which the company should engage in meeting new military requirements of the Government, with emphasis on communications, computation and information handling, and space system activities.

"Mr. Lehrer brings to this position a broad background and years of experience in military and scientific fields and in the analysis and assessment of such programs for the space era," Mr. Malcarney said. "This appointment is in line with RCA's strengthening of the understanding and evaluation of advanced space requirements and the development of close working relationships with all elements of the defense and national scientific programs."

Prior to his appointment with RCA, Mr. Lehrer was Assistant Staff Director of the Senate Committee on Aeronautical and Space Sciences, which was headed by Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson, then Majority Leader.

One of Mr. Lehrer's last special assignments prior to leaving Government service was to serve as a member of President Kennedy's special task force on space, headed by Dr. Jerome B. Wiesner, who is now the President's science advisor.

CAPT. KITTINGER GETS JOHN JEFFRIES AWARD

CAPT. Joseph W. Kittinger, USAF, who parachuted a record 102,800 feet from a free balloon 16 August, 1960, received the IAS John Jeffries Award.

The Jeffries Award is given to the individual who has contributed most to advancement of aerospace medicine during the preceding year.

On 2 June, 1956, Captain Kittinger soared to 97,000 feet in a Man-High Project free balloon to prove the life support systems of the capsule. Three years later, on 16 November, 1959, he began the first of a series of high altitude parachute jumps to determine whether the human body could be stabilized during long free-falls.

His main objective was to overcome one of the prime dangers encountered during high altitude bail-outs—that of retaining consciousness while spinning through space at high revolutions in the descent toward denser air where the parachutes would be effective.

Captain Kittinger's first high altitude leap was almost his last. Stepping out into space at 76,400 feet, his experimental stabilizing device—a five foot drouge chute actuated by a timing device—opened too early, and streamed. His body tumbled at 88 revolutions per minute before he reached air dense enough for his main chest pack chute to be deployed.

Shortcomings of the equipment were overcome and Kittinger made subsequent delayed bail-outs from 75,000 and 102,800 feet—the latter establishing a world's record for both open gondola balloon ascent and parachute drop. The experiments, accomplished at great personal risk, demonstrated the feasibility of escape at altitudes comparable to those attained by high performance aircraft, and formed the basis for his IAS award.

Married to the former Pauline Bauer, and the father of two sons, he resides at 2870 Armen Avenue, Dayton, Ohio, where he is assigned to the Wright Air Development Center.

The IAS Committee for the John Jeffries Award consisted of Hugh L. Dryden, NASA Deputy Administrator; Lt. Gen. D. L. Putt, USAF-Ret., President of the Institute of the Aerospace Sciences; G. J. SAC Achieves Safest Flying Year; Accident Rate Drops To 2.9 Per 100,000 Hours

An all-time flying safety record was achieved by SAC in 1960, with a combined major and minor flying accident rate of 2.19 accidents per 100,000 flying hours.

The 1960 record is 30% lower than the previous record of 3.09 accidents per 100,000 flying hours established in 1959.

The record was accompanied by a marked decrease in the number of SAC crewmen who lost their lives while supporting the SAC mission of deterrence. Forty-five casualties were recorded during the period, 21 less than the previous low of 66 in 1959 and 135 less than the 180 in 1950.

Announcing the new safety record, General Thomas S. Power, SAC CinC, said, "The record is excellent, but even more important is the fact that fewer SAC flyers lost their lives than in any previous year. The cost of deterring war is high and these 45 men gave their lives to help keep the peace. Their contribution to freedom should be recognized by all free peoples."

Flying hours more than tripled to 1-

554,097 in 1960, since 1949, the first year for which accurate records are available. In that year, a total of 412,000 flying hours were accomplished, and the accident rate was 54 per 100,000 flying hours.

"The drop in SAC aircraft accidents since 1949 is an amazing 97 percent," General Power said.

During 1960 there were only 34 major and minor aircraft accidents, 16 less than the 50 recorded in 1959. A major accident is charged against the command when an aircraft is completely destroyed or sustains substantial damage. A minor accident requires only 150 or less manhours to restore the plane to operational status, depending on the type aircraft.

The 7th Air Division in the United Kingdom, the 3d Air Division on Guam and 61 SAC bases throughout the world were accident free in 1960.

General Power emphasized that the command achieved the record low accident rate and loss in lives in 1960 while fulfilling its 24-hour-a-day global mission as the Free World's major deterrent force.

MATS Buys Lockheed C-140's 'Off The Shelf'

The Air Force has ordered six off-the-shelf Lockheed C-140 jet transports for use by MATS.

First delivery will be in September, the second in October and the remainder in 1962.

The Air Force purchased five C-140 aircraft last September for use by MATS' Airways and Air Communication Service. The first of these is scheduled to go into operation in 1962 at Robins AFB, Ga. They will be used as high-flying electronic laboratories to check the accuracy and reliability of United States military navigational aids and air traffic control facilities throughout the world.

The six new MATS' aircraft on order will be assigned to the 1254th Air Transport Wing at Washington, D. C., as special mission aircraft replacing propeller-driven Convair C-131s.

Total cost for the six aircraft is expected to be $9.4 million.

The aircraft are standard C-140 "Jet-Stars," winner of a competition for multi-jet training purposes and to serve administrative and utility requirements. They carry eight passengers and two crew members at altitudes up to 45,000 feet. Speed is in the 500 mph. class. Range is approximately 1,900 miles. Four 3,000-pound-thrust Pratt & Whitney JT 12-A-6 jet engines are fixed to the fuselage near the tail. The aircraft are built at Lockheed's Marietta, Ga., plant.

Modernization of the 1254th Air Transport Wing with small jet aircraft has been under consideration for two years. The wing currently operates three VC-137 jets, the military version of the Boeing 707, in addition to C-118s, C-121s and C-131s.

Court Rules 3-2 Against Pay Relief

of fact and mistakes of law, or that Congress intended that a soldier or sailor who had been paid less than the law entitled him to, should have to resort to some difficult and expensive course of action to get the rest of his money, just because he was underpaid by reason of a misinterpretation of a statute, which misinterpretation had been long since corrected," Judge Madden said.

He continued: "This is not a grant of a narrow and grudging jurisdiction. It intended not only to do justice to servicemen but to make it unnecessary for them to bring their grievances to Congress for special legislation. It intended to give the Secretaries something approaching the wide discretion which Congress itself had to remedy injustices. . . .

"The opinion of the Assistant Comptroller General, quoted above, suggests some annoyance on the part of his office at the fact that officers like the plaintiffs are escaping the rigors of the statutes of limitations. The statute applicable to this court is six years. We have no reason to be annoyed because a claimant whose claim is eight years old and who could not get relief here can get relief from the Comptroller General. That is simply because Congress, in its wisdom, has seen fit to give that official a ten-year statute of limitations. In the same way, Congress has given the Secretaries the authority, up to October 31, 1961, to correct injustices. The fact that this court, and the Comptroller General, do not have so much leeway is irrelevant," the judge stressed.

"In the cases before us," Judge Madden said, "the Comptroller General has done exactly what his representative has said he would not do, and what the (House Armed Services) Committee said he was not to have the power to do. He has refused to permit the Navy to pay concededly just debts to servicemen, and has placed his refusal upon the ground that the Secretary's Correction Board did not have jurisdiction to decide the case. He has no authority to determine the Correction Board's jurisdiction.

"The Comptroller General, by his September 11, 1959 ruling, unless corrected by this court, will require these plaintiffs and other officers similarly situated to go to Congress for relief." Judge Madden concluded, "The maximum of annoyance to the officers, the Congress, and this court will have been achieved. The maximum frustration of the purpose of the Reorganization Act of 1946, the purpose of relieving Congress by authorizing the military services to correct their own errors, will have been achieved. And nothing whatever, of any conceivable use, will have been accomplished."

Counsel for Captain Haslip was Col. Gur Emery, of the Washington, D. C., law firm of Emery and Wood.

"White Charger" Speeds Retirements

The Air Force, employing "White Charger" legislation voted by Congress last year, will retire 370 permanent lieutenant colonels and 486 permanent colonels.

The Board chose 594 permanent lieutenant colonels and 314 regular Air Force colonels for continuation on active duty.

The 756 permanent officers whose retirements will be accelerated will end their careers no later than 31 July 1961.

We Must Have A Clear Military Program In Space

A new study by the staff of the House Committee on Science and Astronautics discusses a problem which should be solved soon and satisfactorily—the position of the Defense Department and the military services vis-a-vis the National Aeronautics and Space Administration in the matter of the use of space for defense.

The Committee's Staff Report states:

"With the transfer of many DoD space oriented resources to NASA, the onus of new accomplishments that may ultimately be applicable to military systems may shift to NASA. In the present state of technology it is difficult to tell what is a peaceful and what is a military application. NASA is directed to tell the military if it finds information of military value, but the determination is not necessarily made with military counsel.

"As presently organized, there is no requirement that the NASA program contribute extensively to the future military capability needed to enhance the national security. While coordination is very effective in transfer of information and in arranging joint efforts when firm targets and goals have been set, intelligent management and strong leadership can best tie together the efforts of DoD and NASA for the common good."

From the military standpoint we find no less an authority than Lt. Gen. B. A. Schriever, for five years commander of the Air Force Ballistic Missile Division and now Commander of the Air Research and Development Command, holding that "our military requirements for space will not be completely satisfied by the developments under way or planned in our civilian programs." General Schriever points out that the reason that the divergence between our military and civilian programs has not been apparent thus far is that it has been necessary to use essentially the same and only resources which have been available largely from ballistic missile programs during the past several years.

What is needed is a stronger statutory recognition of the place the Defense Department and the Services must play in space developments for defense. At the same time, the military should be given stronger representation and a better liaison with the NASA program both for the long range research and development work and for recognition of military potentials in current programs.

Correction Of Retired Inequalities Vital To Defense

Equality of treatment and equality of opportunity for continued useful service for retired Service personnel rests upon two recommendations made by the outgoing President in his final budget message.

The first is the correction of the mistake made in the 1958 Military Pay Act when it departed from all precedent and failed to base the pay of those previously retired upon the new active duty pay scales. This caused a cleavage in the retired pay lists which has done serious damage to the morale of the active personnel who fear that their futures are threatened by this departure from principle.

Both the new President and his Vice President are on record in favor of remedying this action. The House passed the reform measure in the last Congress, but it died in the Senate Committee without any consideration. However, both Democratic and Republican Senators and Representatives have hastened to introduce new bills in this Congress.

The other Eisenhower recommendation concerning the retired list is that which would straighten out the mess of ancient and conflicting statutes which hamper the use of retired officers by civilian agencies of the government. These outmoded laws are as unfair to the government as they are to the individual.

We hope that the 87th Congress will act promptly on these two vital measures. Important as they are to the retired personnel as individuals, they are equally important to the maintenance of morale, and hence efficiency, of all those on the active lists of the Armed Forces.

One ROTC Story

■ After a year of wailing and public hand-wringing over the sad state of ROTC (THE JOURNAL, 5 Nov. 60; Army, Oct., Nov., Dec. 1960; the Hanson Baldwin series in the New York Times last August; US News & World Report, 8 Feb. 60, etc., etc.)—I am fed up. The fact is, the situation doesn't have to be that bad.

At the risk of appearing smug or boastful, I sketch below the outlines of the Northeastern story. I can speak frankly, since I did not write the story—I have just inherited it.

Here are the facts:

1. The Northeastern University ROTC unit is the largest voluntary Army ROTC unit in the United States (approximately 2800 cadets).

2. It is the largest unit on a single campus in the nation.

3. It has the largest companies of Scabbard & Blade and Pershing Rifles in the country.

4. Its student chapters of Armed Forces Communications and Electronics Association (AFCEA) and Society of American Military Engineers (SAME) are the largest we know of.

5. It produces each year one of the largest increments of USAR 2d Lts. of all campuses in the nation, including military colleges and service academies.

How is it done? Of course, like democracy, it has to be worked at every day to make it thrive, and a dedicated instructor group does just that. Beyond this, however, the quintessential ingredient in any successful ROTC program is solid, unequivocal support from the very top echelon of the sponsoring institution.

This is the case at Northeastern. It is a great story—one that should be set beside some of the Army's more unhappy experiences to help balance the record.

Second Class Retirement?

■ As a subscriber to the ARMY NAVY AIR FORCE JOURNAL, and as a retired officer of the Regular U. S. Air Force, I have long wondered why, in the so-called Equalization Pay Legislation, as it has been proposed for Congressional consideration for the past two years, both the Administration and Congress have appeared to agree and accept the premise that there is such a thing as first class and second class retirement. In spite of the repeated references to maintaining the traditional relationship between active duty and retired pay, I cannot recall any editorial comment in THE JOURNAL recognizing this deficiency in the proposed legislation in that such legislation will provide no relief for the career officer who retired before the enactment of the Career Compensation Act of 1949.

What is to be the fate of the career officer who required no Career Compensation Act to induce him to remain in the service for over thirty years and who just happened to enter the Service during World War I and who made a career of the service, even through the 15 per cent pay cut period of the early 'thirties.

Why does not the proposed legislation provide for the officers who retired before the enactment of the Career Compensation Act of 1949? These are the individuals who have passed the age at which supplementary income through private employment is no longer possible and who truly deserve some legislative consideration. To support such a bill as is now before the Congress, is to concede the existence of first- and second-class retirement. I do not believe that the Administration or Congress would agree that this condition should exist.

Army Promotions

■ A disquieting atmosphere has settled over the Army. On the one hand are the ever changing personnel policies and their impact on career personnel and most recently the short sighted policy on the place of dependents overseas with military personnel.

Within the past few months we have been treated to the news of officers being promoted who have not appeared on promotion lists and in spite of official efforts to explain this away doubt exists among Army officers as to the soundness of promotion policy.

Why cannot the names of promotion board members be released to the public? What is intrinsically wrong to publicize the instructions given to these boards?

There is an attitude prevailing in the Army that most of the ills that beset morale etc. of its personnel can be laid at the doors of the Congress. Perhaps a portion of this is true but certainly this service can do much to remedy problems which directly affect so many of its people.

Specifically let us examine one part of the promotion policies, i.e. temporary promotion to lieutenant colonel. We will deal in numbers of the Army Promotion List only.

It has been more than two years since the policy of "best qualified" promotions was initiated. As a bit of a background, let us go back to the last promotion under the "fully qualified" method. Under that board (1957) 187 officers were passed over for promotion.

The first board under the new policy considered 2,262 zone officers. The non-selection ratio here was about 50%. Of the 187 previous passovers only 4 of these officers were promoted.

The second and most recently completed board considered 3,281 zone officers. Included within this figure were 935 officers previously not selected (within this number were 235 officers who already had one or more passovers to their credit or discredit). Of this entire group the non-selection ratio again was about 50%.

The non-selection ratio for those officers who were not promoted by the first board (B.Q.) and were within the

IN THE JOURNAL

Air Force Is Reorganized; Marine Corps Is Without A Chief; Private Gets Ball & Chain

10 Years Ago—After a brief debate, the House this week passed by unanimous voice vote the Air Force Organization Act of 1951. The legislation is similar to a measure passed last year regarding the organization of the Army.

50 Years Ago—There is no prospect of the immediate appointment of a commandant of the Marine Corps. . . . The present arrangement, by which Col. William P. Biddle is virtually acting as Commandant of the Corps under the direction of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy, is proving very satisfactory to the Navy Department.

97 Years Ago—Private Walter Sheets, Co. B., 2d U. S. Cavalry, (has been sentenced by court martial) to forfeit all pay and allowances now due or that may become due him, to be indelibly branded on the left hip with the letter D, one and a half inches long, in presence of his regiment, and to be confined at hard labor, with a ball and chain attached to one of his legs, for the space of ten years.

zone of consideration the second time was 67%. But the non-selection ratio for those who had one passover from the last fully qualified board was an incredible 80%.

Diminishing Returns

The law of diminishing returns showed these ratios. If an officer's name appeared within the zone of consideration:

For the 1st time—1 out of 2 selections
For the 2d time—1 out of 3 selections
With one passover—1 out of 5 selections
The odds against selection will lengthen proportionately for the next and succeeding promotion boards.

Probing deeper into the actions of the last board, of those selected for promotion, 589 reserve officers already have received their orders for mandatory retirement. The paradoxical and almost unbelievable thing to understand is that of these numbers 7 were selected outside the zone as outstanding officers.

There certainly is no argument with these promotions. Because a man is being retired he should not be divested of his right to promotion. The point is made, however, that the right hand apparently does not know what the left hand is doing. Here a previous board decided that these officers should not be retained beyond 20 years and another board states that they are better qualified than many officers who are remaining on active duty. Someone is wrong. We should not dispense with the services of these officers so readily.

What is the criteria for promotion? What weight is given to marked improvement in efficiency since the last adverse (and let it not be said that a non-selection is not an adverse action, passovers or not notwithstanding) board action? Is it worth the effort to overcome great handicaps or is it better to drift in performance?

Morale Havoc

This policy is playing havoc with the morale and efficiency of these officers. It is an open invitation to mediocrity. Many officers are disgruntled, disillusioned, and disenchanted with the oft-time capricious and vacillating policies. Study the statistics of those resigning, retiring etc. The best recruiting and retaining is from within and not from without. If you can't convince the active Army officers to remain in great numbers how is it hoped to gain and retain outside personnel.

There is too much stress placed on a college degree for every commissioned officer: Is this to look good statistically on charts and graphs and to point that the officer corps is college educated? A college degree never gives assurance that an officer is more efficient or a better leader than one who does not possess a degree. There are ways to encourage education, but this program has become a fetish and almost a mania to cram and jam a college education down the throat of all officers. If this policy reaches its unhappy fruition we will have officers who know more and more about less and less until finally, they will know everything about nothing, or, will they know less and less about more and more until finally, they will know nothing about everything.

What of those officers who have been found fully qualified more than once but not promoted? Will they be given this promotion upon retirement? This has a more pronounced effect upon Regular officers who do not have a reserve promotion in their pockets. Most reserve officers who are serving in the grade of major retire with a reserve lieutenant colonel's grade and draw retirement pay based upon this rank.

The present policy should be reexamined. The zones of consideration are too wide. We are losing the abilities of too many officers by this policy. There is no surety of infallibility of this board in their selections. A detailed analysis should be made of the records of those officers who have not been selected by one or more boards.

It would be interesting to know how many officers in the above mentioned categories feel that the last selection board carefully studied all records objectively. Personally, I do not question the integrity nor the good intentions of those board members; I question their judgment in many respects.

NAME WITHHELD

Retired Pay

"And, after all, what is a lie? 'Tis but the truth in masquerade."

When the ubiquitous Don Juan made this crack years ago he was probably thinking of the current era of the hard sell and the lubricious lie.

Or perhaps he foresaw the figure-fagin'ers who were hired by a Senate star chamber committee to prove the pre-formed conclusions of the committee.

Projecting into a remote and uncertain future, they have subverted and deformed the basic truth. With the aid of wild actuarial assumptions, they have produced bedazzling figures. They have further confused the real issue, and have worsened the existing general misunderstanding of military retirees.

The total cost of military retirement for the next 23 years (until 1983) was figured under three methods:

1. With no future increase in retired pay: $47.5 billion.
2. A six per cent increase every four years starting 1962: $58.2 billion.
3. The traditional recomputation system if future active duty increases are equal to those since World War II: $80.5 billion.

Slant And Distort

To further slant and distort, the chairman of the subcommittee has pointed out that a saving of $22.3 billion will accrue over the next 23 years, if the six per cent increase plan were adopted instead of the old traditional system.

By inference it may be concluded that the Senator is not averse to an expenditure of $58.2 billion for military retirement over the next 23 years. If so, he can have no real objection to the made-to-look-bad traditional method, for in truth by the time the Federal income taxes were deducted the net cost of this system would not exceed the approved $58.2 billion.

Dialectical Diversion

This bit of dialectical diversion is not acceptance of the "Ify" figures of the actuaries. They are based on presumptions that pay raises over the next 23 years will match those since World War II. This is a tenuous base.

Pulling out all stops to stop the drive for justice for the pre-1958 retirees, comparison is made between military and civilian retirement. There can be no comparison.

Two differences between the military and civilians will suffice to preclude such comparison: One: Selective Service, or forced draft is required to man military organizations. Never for civilians. Two: Civilian employees as such are never asked or expected to give their lives in line of duty.

It is irrelevant to include recomputation of retired pay for the pre-1958 retiree in other studies, or problems. It is also unfair, and serves to compound an injustice.

Official and shabby treatment of these retirees by those in the upper echelons encourages the public to consider them second-class.

GEORGE L. BRITTINGHAM
COLONEL, AUS, RETIRED

Not "Hip-Pocket"

The purpose of this letter is not to question the integrity or the sincerity of General Bolté and members of his committee but to point out their inaccurate observation and derogatory referral to the permanent promotion system currently in effect for reserve officers on active duty. I quote from page 11, THE JOURNAL, 7 January 1961, under the title—General Bolté Discusses Report—"This would eliminate the so-called 'hip pocket' retirement pro-

"ARMY NOT MY CAREER," NEW SEC'Y ONCE SAID

"THE Army is not my career . . . I have no axe to grind in Washington." These are the words of the new Secretary of the Army Elvis J. Stahr, jr. They were spoken nine years ago, on 26 January 1952 when he was serving as Special Assistant to Secretary of the Army Frank Pace.

In this address, made in Louisville to the Kentucky Press Association, Secretary Stahr explained in detail Army manpower problems and the impact of the Korean War. He stressed the importance of the National Guard and Reserve, and called for enactment of Universal Military Training.

His comments about the dedication of career military people are worthy of repetition as he prepares to assume the Army's top civilian post.

Mr. Stahr recalled his four years of Infantry service in WWII in three different theaters and said:

"I was convinced then that all work was done at the bottom and I used to look with very little less than scorn at fellow officers who were transferred to what we called the 'chairborne infantry' in the Pentagon.

"The naivete of that point of view, which still persists in many quarters, rather astonishes me now. I have, for the past 10 months, been closely associated with many of the Army's top leaders, military and civilian, and I want to say frankly that I have never observed greater conscientiousness and devotion to duty. My experience denies completely the cynical notion that the Pentagon is full of bureaucrats with not enough work to keep them busy. . . .

"The staff work in the Army," he told the Kentucky Press Association, "is thorough, efficient and earnest; the thought and energy that go into improving the efficiency of our fighting forces, into licking problems as they arise, and into planning far ahead, are heartening and impressive."

motions which go to thousands of officers on active duty who hold higher ROPA ranks."

First, this is not a retirement promotion. It is a permanent promotion that reserve officers on active duty (specified time in grade) sometimes receive ahead of their AUS promotion but for which they do not receive active duty pay. It follows that should an active duty reserve officer be fortunate enough to hold a higher permanent grade than his AUS status, he is then retired in his permanent grade and subsequently draws the higher pay. Conversely, the regular officer starts drawing the pay of his permanent grade on the day he is promoted.

Secondly, the use of clichés such as "hip pocket" to describe the reserve officer promotion system, which is well defined in Army Regulations and the Officers Personnel Act of 1947 has an insidious connotation. This, I am sure, was not the intent of the committee.

In retrospect the reserve officers have carried the full load of reduction-in-force actions, those that survived, with rare exceptions, are forced to retire upon completion of 20 years' active service. They have ridden in the back-seat on promotion, school and assignment opportunities. It is hoped that the dignity of this group of dedicated soldiers be spared further humiliation and allowed to retain their only remaining incentive.

"MAJOR"

Art's Pay Formula

May I add my voice in support of the program proposed by "Friendly Artilleryman in Support of Doughfeet (As Usual)" in your 5 November issue. Accrual pay for the infantryman should be a good companion program for the gold-saving schemes now being implemented. (If we're going to keep the gold in the country we might as well use it in the good old American way!)

I digress. My main purpose in writing is to ensure that the artilleryman is not overlooked in the accrual pay program. The infantryman's friend of 5 November, out of modesty I know, failed to mention the artilleryman's qualifications. His hazards are many and varied, but to simplify the program I recommend that accrual pay be based on the number of days he was subjected to counter-battery fire (CBF) at a flat rate per day ($1.00?). This rate would be supplemented by a sum termed proximity of shell-burst (PSB). The inevitable certificate would be submitted stating the number of feet between the artilleryman's position and the nearest shell-burst ever experienced. (Dud landings unacceptable because they are an invitation to Congressional debate.) The PSB rate will be computed from a standard table and will be in inverse proportion to the distance from the burst (rounded off to the nearest foot). Add to this a flat rate ($1.00?) for each day spent as a forward observer (FO) with the doughfeet and we should have a reasonable accrual pay for old artillerymen. The formula is a Finance Officer's dream:

Monthly Accrual Pay =

CBF(days) + PSB(k) + FO(days)

As the old artilleryman obsolesces because of infantry rocketry and missilemanship, he will have his accrual pay to chuckle over. As a final thought, all accrual pay should be carried over to supplement what we all know is inadequate retirement pay. We've never been able to do this with flight pay, hazard pay or the like, but changing the name excites the hope that Congress won't notice.

MEMO--

IF PRESIDENT KENNEDY FOLLOWS a precedent set by President Harding, the new White House Physician, Dr. Janet G. Travell, would be appointed a brigadier general or a rear admiral. When President Harding came to Washington in 1921, he brought with him his own physician, Dr. John P. Sawyer. The Chief Executive nominated him to the Senate as a brigadier general. There was quick confirmation for General Sawyer.

AS WHITE HOUSE PHYSICIAN, with or without military rank, Dr. Travell will be the first woman to fill this office. She succeeds Maj. Gen. Howard McC. Snyder, MC, USA-Ret. He was recalled to active duty when General of the Army Eisenhower was ordered to SHAPE.

DR. HERBERT F. YORK, DoD Director of Research and Engineering, can claim henceforth that his career includes service as Secretary of Defense. For 28 hours, from noon on 20 January until 4 p.m. on 21 January when Secretary McNamara was sworn in at the White House, Dr. York was the "Acting Secretary."

THE LAW PRESCRIBES that the Secretary of the Army must be a civilian, but from noon on the 20th until 2 p.m. on 24 January when Secretary Elvis J. Stahr, jr., took the oath of office in Secretary McNamara's office at the Pentagon, the "Acting Secretary" of the Army was General George H. Decker, CofS. The succession law provides that when there is no Secretary, Under Secretary or Assistant Secretary of the Army, the CofS must fill this responsibility.

ALONE OF THE SERVICES, the Army lost its entire civilian secretariat. In the Air Force, Under Secretary Joseph Charyk and Assistant Secretary Lyle S. Garlock have been retained. In the Navy, Assistant Secretary (R&D) James H. Wakelin, jr., has been continued in office by the Kennedy Administration.

OUTGOING ARMY SECRETARY Wilber M. Brucker, who had drawn the displeasure of Secretary of Defense Gates when he spoke out at Ft. Benning, Ga., on the adverse morale aspects of the "Gold Dollar Widow" order the day after it was issued, was the only one of the three Service Secretaries who was not awarded a medal for his Pentagon service. It could well be that Secretary and Mrs. Brucker found much more compensation in the fact that some 500 Army people and their families, acting on their own, braved snow-choked roads to come to the Pentagon 20 January to say farewell to the Secretary.

AS HE WAS DEPARTING the building for the last time, Secretary Brucker was surprised suddenly to find himself shaking hands with a Navy chief petty officer. The CPO told the Secretary: "Many of us in the Navy also are sorry to see you go."

THE FORMER ARMY SECRETARY, who knows his way around in the political arena, promised Army people who attended a series of farewell ceremonies for him across the Nation that he would continue to fight for the Army after leaving the Pentagon. He told a group of top Pentagon NCO's: "I may be able to do a better job outside." Don't be surprised if the former Governor of Michigan employs the exquisite skill he used in handling the retirement of Lt. Gen. James M. Gavin to sound off in support of the Army.

THE NEW DEFENSE DEPARTMENT COMPTROLLER, Charles J. Hitch, a WWII Army first lieutenant, has told Congress he would like to continue as a trustee of Kemper Military School, Boonville, Mo. There's a good reason. Mr. Hitch was born at Boonville, while his father was head of the school. His family has been associated with Kemper for nearly 100 years.

NO MAJOR DEFENSE REORGANIZATION actions will be taken during the first weeks of the Kennedy Administration, but the matter will be under high priority discussion at the top echelon of the Pentagon. Secretary of Defense McNamara has never said that he is opposed to reorganization moves, either those he can order himself with the approval of the President or those which require Congressional action.

SECRETARY MCNAMARA HAS STATED only that he wants to study the defense structure closely to determine if any changes are needed and, if so, how they should be made. In this study, the new Secretary has said he will benefit greatly from the great experience his Deputy, Roswell L. Gilpatric, a former AF Under Secretary and member of the Rockefeller and Symington Committees, has acquired in the field of Defense Organization and Reorganization.

THOSE WHO KNOW THE DEPUTY are well aware, as are President Kennedy and Secretary McNamara, that Mr. Gilpatric would not have accepted the No. 2 post at the Pentagon if, sight unseen, a determination had been made by his superiors to reject all the Reorganization proposals advanced by the Symington Committee.

THE NEW PENTAGON BOSS, Secretary McNamara, has a reputation for being a "quick study." If he becomes convinced that changes should be made in the organization and administration of the Armed Forces, he will move with dispatch to recommend them to the President and to Congress. Don't be surprised if there is some action along these lines by Easter.

ARMED FORCES PROMOTION POLICIES could trigger discussion of Defense Reorganization on Capitol Hill. During forthcoming hearings on the budget, Army, Navy, Air Force, and Marine Corps leaders, as well as DoD spokesmen, will be asked what they think about the Bolté Report. The Services have until 15 March to make known their viewpoints to the Secretary of Defense on the controversial personnel study.

THE BOLTÉ REPORT made no recommendation for a single promotion list for all the Services, but in any discussion of its proposals on Capitol Hill, this issue will be aired at length. And once this gate is opened, Armed Services and Appropriations Committee members who favor Defense Reorganization would press on to other personnel areas of interest, such as, for example, the fact that in unified commands there is not a uniform procedure for filling out efficiency and fitness reports for Service officers.

THE NAVY WHENEVER POSSIBLE insists that a fitness report on one of its officers be filled out and signed by a Naval officer. The Army and Air Force are less parochial. They do not insist with comparable vigor on such a course. Army and Air Force officers say that the Navy policy sometimes can influence the thinking of a Naval officer assigned to a unified command who must, as in the case with all officers, be concerned about his next rating report.

THE ARMY-NAVY GAME will not be the only football contest which will draw the anxious interest next fall of a former Army Air Force officer, Secretary of Defense McNamara, 44, and the new Under Secretary of the Navy, Paul B. Fay, jr., 42. The two natives of San Francisco can be expected to show equal interest in the outcome of what, until now at least, has been the "Big Game" for them. This is the annual contest between the University of California at Berkeley from which Secretary McNamara was graduated in '37, and Stanford University at Palo Alto, from which Under Secretary Fay was graduated in '41.

UNDER SECRETARY FAY joined the Navy in '42 and saw PT boat service in the Pacific with President Kennedy, for whom he worked in Congressional campaigns and in the '60 campaign. At the end of the war, Under Secretary Fay, who holds the Bronze Star, was undergoing flight training.

THE SERVICES WILL HOPE that President Kennedy, as he indicated in his first news conference, will be successful in finding a "more satisfactory method" to check the flow of gold abroad than continuation of the "Gold Dollar Widow" directive in its present form. The Chief Executive indicated that he would communicate his views to Congress on this matter within the next two weeks. This will come as the full impact of the Eisenhower directive begins to be felt throughout the Armed Forces.

PRESIDENT KENNEDY CONFIRMED previously published reports in The Journal that Secretary of Defense McNamara and Secretary of the Treasury Douglas Dillon have been conferring on this problem. The Cabinet members have explored the impact on "morale and strength," the President reported. The Journal has forecast that the order will be amended or rescinded.

SERVICE PEOPLE WILL BE PLEASED with the President's praise of the conduct of the RB-47 crewmen, and most especially his recognition of their families, who acted in "the highest traditions of military service."

RUMORED FOR RETIREMENT IN JUNE, when he will complete 30 years service, is Lt. Gen. Donald N. Yates, Deputy Director of Defense Research and Engineering (Ranges and Space Ground Support). He was Commander of the AF Missile Test Center, Patrick AFB, Fla., and the Atlantic Missile Range, Cape Canaveral, Fla., for more than 5 years before assignment to the Pentagon last April. This was followed by his promotion the next month to three-star rank. One of the top meteorologists in the Armed Forces, General Yates, 51, was made a permanent major general in 1952.

THE FORMER SUPREME ALLIED COMMANDER ATLANTIC, Admiral Jerauld Wright, who retired last year, has been recalled to active duty to serve on the Board of estimates of the Central Intelligence Agency. Six years in a top NATO command weighing global defense problems and working with our Allies fits him particularly well for his new position where he will be involved in judging world security matters. Admiral and Mrs. Wright live in Washington, D. C., at 2706 36th St., N.W., Navy retired admirals can be recalled to duty and not count against star rank ceilings. This is not so in the Army and Air Force.

THE NEW NAVAL AIDE, Cdr. Tazewell T. Shepard, jr., appears a cinch for selection to captain, but he must wait until the next fiscal year. A USNA '42 graduate, Commander Taylor, 40 on 22 January, has been in rank since 1 April 1955. That's 3 months longer than the junior commander selected for fiscal '61 promotion to captain. He is Cdr. James L. Holloway, III, also USNA '42. Commander Taylor, Lineal list No. 11450, was not passed over by the last board. Commander Holloway, No. 11461, was chosen from below the zone.

USCOA ACTUARIES HAVE PREPARED formidable studies to support their point (see page 1) that the annuity program should be restricted to Service members with more than 20 years service, excluding all disability retirees who have served for a shorter time. Their studies show that 25% of all disability retirees who started the annuity plan in 1959 died within 30 days of retirement; 37% died within one year of retirement. Counting only those who have already signed up for the program, the actuaries estimate the program stands to lose $13.6 million on disability retirees with annuity plan options now in effect.

FORMER ARMY SECRETARY Robert T. Stevens, President, has announced that former Army Assistant Secretary George H. Roderick, is joining J. P. Stevens & Co., Inc., New York City. Mr. Roderick, who joined the Department of the Army early in the Eisenhower Administration at the request of then Secretary Stevens, will be associated with the financial management of the textile company.

ARMY DAUGHTERS' SCHOLARSHIP DRIVE

The Daughters of the U. S. Army provide a limited number of scholarships to daughters of retired or deceased commissioned officers of the Regular Army from the Eugenia Bradford Roberts Memorial Fund, named for the founder of the Society. This fund is supported by contributions made in honor of deceased friends or relatives by anyone desiring to provide a living memorial, and by the chapters and individual members of the Society.

Each grant consists of an amount up to the maximum of $400 to be used for tuition, laboratory fees and text books. Anyone interested in applying for scholarship assistance for the academic year 1961-62 is invited to write at once to Mrs. Edith Morgan Cabell, National Scholarship Chairman, D.U.S.A., 3600 Connecticut Ave., N. W., Washington 8, D. C. For future scholarships, after 1961-62, applicants should apply prior to 31 March for the next succeeding academic year.

Of the 10 scholarships already awarded by the Association, seven have been granted to orphans or widows of persons who served with the First Marine Division. The remainder have been awarded on a competitive basis through the Scholarship Corporation.

The first of these merit scholarships was named in honor of former Marine Commandant, General A. A. Vandegrift who first led the division in combat and who won the Medal of Honor at Guadalcanal. The second is in memory of Sgt. John Basilone who was awarded the Medal of Honor at Guadalcanal and was killed in action at Iwo Jima. The third was named for the late Cpl. Charles G. Abrell, killed in action in Korea and posthumously awarded the Medal of Honor.

The new scholarship will be similarly named, probably for some hero from the same area as the student winner.

Information regarding this scholarship, or membership in the Association, may be obtained by writing to the Association, Box 84, Alexandria, Va.

QM GENERAL HONORS ATTACHES

The Army Quartermaster General and Mrs. Andrew T. McNamara and the Deputy Quartermaster General and Mrs. Roy T. Evans, Jr., held their annual reception honoring foreign military attaches at the Bolling AFB Officers' Club, 24 January, when some 150 guests attended.

The hosts received in a terrace veranda at the entrance to the Toreador Room. The motif for the occasion suggested a French cafe-garden setting, with a white picket fence enclosing the bandstand where a combo from the U. S. Army Band played throughout the evening.

Highlight of the affair was a surprise for the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Gen. Lyman L. Lemnitzer, when General McNamara presented him with a large glass-enclosed case of polished walnut containing sculptured figurines of General Lemnitzer in the various uniforms he has worn throughout his military career.

General Twining Is Honored By National Security Industrial Association; Former JCS Chairman Warns Against "Complacency Of Despair" And "National Cringing"

From first page—

3) We are second best to the Russians in military power;

4) We are all about to die in atomic war; and

5) Our national prestige is lost.

"These beliefs are distorted," General Twining declared. "That some people believe them is bad. What is worse, however, is that so many seem willing to accept these distortions and live with them."

The answer? General Twining advised:

"We have the strength, economic and moral, as well as military, to save ourselves and our friends. First, we must have faith in ourselves; second, we must act on that faith."

General Twining recalled that some years ago it was not difficult to become complacent. Compared to the rest of the world, he said, we were extremely well off. During those years of preponderant wealth and strength, he recalled, it was all too easy for some to be lulled into a false sense of security.

The General recalled that he and others saw the danger of complacency then and spoke out against it. But, he declared, it was really the Russian Sputnik and other Communist successes that spoke most loudly and changed the general view to a "shocked awareness." Our people, he said, were beginning to hear clearly the rumbling of Communist strength.

Now, General Twining continued we are in an era of "complacency of despair."

Continuing, the General said:

Lead To National Cringing

"This is what I must warn against tonight.

"This sort of feeling can lead to a national cringing. Already, many of our people seem to have their tails between their legs. We hear cries of 'Peace at any price' and 'No nuclear tests' and 'Ban the Bomb.'

"We—you and I—have some work to do. First, we must make sure that all people know the truth about our strengths and weaknesses. We must show that we have the power to prevail. We must also show that we could be in just as disastrous a position if we allow the old American qualities of guts and independence to weaken as if we disarm militarily. Our best chances for peace lie in our facing the reality that war could happen and that we are, and must stay, ready for it.

"The first task then is to show to our people how firm our strength really is. 'Cries of waste and mismanagement have begun to convince people that the military Services are inefficient and thus weak. Nothing could be further from the truth.

"Consider the situation. The military Services have two and a half million people in uniform, plus more than a million civilians. This year alone, defense contracts for production, construction, research and other work will total close to 25 billion dollars. In the military inventory, worth over 120 billion dollars, are over 3 million separate items of supply.

"Fit these factors into an environment of continual obsolescence, changing requirements and fluctuating budgets.

"The wonder to me is that our management is as good as it is; that our efficiency is as high as it is.

"This is not to say we make no mistakes. In this dynamic, ever-changing situation, we are constantly learning, and the learner will always make mistakes. Some of our mistakes are real blunders, the kind that always have and always will be typical of human frailty.

Mistakes Are Newsworthy

"I offer no excuses for mistakes, but I do point out that mistakes are immeasurably more newsworthy than quiet accomplishment. In this age of rapid and complete news coverage, more people are instantly aware of our errors. They are instantly ready to condemn us for them. They do not know what a tiny part of the whole picture these errors fill.

"One of our jobs then is to illuminate the rest of the picture. We should not hide our stupidities and poor judgments; we merely must put them in proper perspective.

"Personally, I think we have much to be proud of, and our people should be proud too.

"Now let us consider the matter of inter-Service bickering. This too makes news. I don't deny that the Services vie with one another. In my last assignment, I was in a better position than any other military man to evaluate the real extent of inter-Service rivalries.

"There are rivalries, of course, some of them are regrettable, and all are newsworthy. What most people fail to remember, however, is that almost by definition, newsworthy means unusual. Thus, inter-Service rivalries are not what is normal or usual. I wish it were practical to have in one document the whole story of how the services work together. If the good and the bad were included in proper proportion, stories of inter-Service achievement would fill the pages. Stories of inter-Service bickering would be comparatively few and short.

Services Work Together

"The record of the Services working together is a record that deserves knowing. The Army, Navy and Air Force work together very effectively, at all levels and all over the world. We must make this more evident.

"Let us move on to the question of the United States being second best. We hear the phrase 'missile gap.' It is now a part of our American vocabulary. The word 'stalemate' is likewise on everybody's tongue. Perhaps we spokesmen for security warned too well. In our efforts to awaken people to Russian progress, perhaps we frightened as many people as we educated. Our professional pessimists have helped to create an image of overpowering Communist strength.

"Certainly as we predicted, Communist military power has been catching up. This is a very dangerous thing.

"Yet, the fact is, they have not caught up with us in total usable strength. They will not unless we allow it.

"It will not be easy for us to keep ahead. One of our new frontiers is space, and it will take a lot of the military-industrial teamwork that is represented here tonight to protect our interests up there. Of course, we are primarily interested in peaceful uses of space, and we would hope that guaranteed safeguards would be established. However, history shows that to use any area peacefully, whether it be land, sea or aerospace, we must be able to defend it. If we cannot defend it and if safeguards fail, the use of space could eventually be denied us. There is no question about it—we face a long period of sacrifice and hard work.

We Can Stay Ahead

"But we can stay ahead, just as we are today. I repeat and emphasize that we still hold a decisive edge in the ability to put powerful weapons on any target in the world. This is the kind of power the Soviets respect, and, believe me, this is the only kind of power they respect.

"They are not impressed by the sometimes questionable votes we try to buy all over the world. The Communists don't mind being called names. They are not trying to win a popularity contest. They are merely trying to win the world, and they won't be stopped by words.

"The United States is not second best, and I think the Russians know this fact better than many of our own people. As long as we keep this edge, war is not imminent. As long as we keep this edge, every rocket attack that Khrushchev talks about is nothing but the phoniest of bluffs. And as far as I, an old poker player, am concerned, bluffs are made to be called, and called early in the game.

"Finally, and in closing, let us look at American prestige.

"We hear much talk about our loss of prestige.

"Among the reasons we do not stand with our heads as high above all others as we did ten years ago, I will mention three.

"The first reason I just touched on. Communist military strength has increased in relation to ours.

"Where a dozen years ago we were the only great military power, now there are two. This was inevitable, and we could not stop it. We don't have to like it, but we need not be ashamed. It would have been impossible to keep as great a military lead over Russia as we had in 1946, without spending our entire national budget and more. There was no need for us to do that, and is no need to now. As long as we are able to keep a decisive edge, we are not only safe, but we can, when we choose, negotiate from a position of strength.

Relative Prestige Reduced

"Thus, our relative prestige created by military strength has been reduced.

It was inescapable, but it need not be a source of despair as long as we work hard to keep the edge of power.

"Another reason that the United States no longer stands so high among nations is that so many other nations have grown so spectacularly in the last dozen years. Many of these countries have grown because of American generosity. Without our lend-lease and other foreign aid, many of the nations that now speak loudly and proudly would still be digging out from under the rubble of the last war. Our help to so much of the world marks a new era in the progress of humanity. Any so-called loss of prestige here is in reality a measure of our success in helping others. In this light, we can be proud that other countries have grown tall enough to stand at our shoulders instead of our knees.

"The third reason for our loss of prestige is what my talk tonight is really all about. This is our own decreasing confidence in ourselves. This complacency of despair is far from being a national characteristic yet, but it could weaken our ability to act like the strong, free world leader that our allies wish us to be.

Communists Bluff Their Way

"The Communists have used their increasing strength, not to shoot at us, but to bluff their way into previously non-Communist countries. In each case where they were successful, the rest of the world became a little more timid, a little more frightened by the thought of war, and a little easier to bluff the next time. Against Communism, the free world desperately needs our leadership and it must be decisive, courageous leadership.

"We have the strength, economic and moral, as well as military, to save ourselves and our friends. First, we must have faith in ourselves; second, we must act on that faith.

"Ladies and Gentlemen, these are the things I believe. Further, I think these are the kind of things that James Forrestal would have said, had he been here tonight. I know that he would always stand with us in our determination to prevail against evil. Let us keep this determination strong."

Rep. Hosmer Seeks Repeal And Amendment Of Dual-Employment, Dual-Pay-Statutes

LEGISLATION to repeal the dual employment laws and amend the dual compensation statutes which bar retired military officers from Government jobs has been introduced in the House by Representative Craig Hosmer (R-Calif.).

Under the Hosmer bill (HR 974), the Civil Service Commission would be permitted to make exceptions to the dual compensation rules "wherever such exceptions are warranted on the basis of Government needs."

The bill provides that the Commission "shall issue standards and regulations governing such exceptions, which may permit such exceptions to be made by a certificate of the appointing officer for not more than 30 days in case of emergency, and shall include in its annual report to the Congress a statement on the use of this authority."

In authorizing the exceptions, the Commission would give consideration to such factors as:

- Occupational shortages
- Emergency conditions when such employment is necessary for the protection of life or property, and
- Highly specialized requirements for unique or uncommon positions.

Representative Hosmer has attempted repeatedly in the past to win House backing for similar legislation.

Former President Eisenhower, in his budget message this year, also called for elimination of the "outmoded and inconsistent statutes" which restrict the Federal employment of retired military people.

Bill Asks Better Travel Rules For Retired

From first page—

tion) to which their household goods could be shipped. If the cost of the shipment should be boosted as a result, the retired member would be required to pay the difference.

• If a member entitled to such transportation should die before exercising his entitlement, transportation for his dependents and movement of his household goods to a selected home would still be authorized.

Under present regulations and Comptroller General decisions, shipment of household goods is authorized only to homes originally selected, comparative costs notwithstanding. The Pentagon has advised Congress that "instances arise in which members—for valid and compelling reasons—change the original home of selection following payment of their personal and dependent travel claims, and prior to shipment of their household goods. If shipment is made to the second home, the entire cost must be borne by the member, regardless of cost factors."

The Comptroller General also has ruled that the right to transportation allowances for a retired member does not survive death or accrue to the retiree's estate, and such right does not accrue to dependents when travel has not been performed prior to the death of the retired member.

This ruling, the Pentagon says, "places certain members retired for physical disability at a distinct disadvantage and introduces an element of risk for all retired members. The ruling appears to negate the basic purpose of the present law permitting a retired member a year in which to select his home and perform travel thereto, and creates situations where certain dependents and household goods are transported at Government expense while others (through no fault of their own) are denied such transportation.

"The purpose of the year of grace permitted under current regulations for the selection of home and performance of travel thereto was established for the purpose of permitting a member who has served long and faithfully to take a reasonable amount of time in selecting his future permanent residence. Health is often a major factor in the selection of such a residence for those personnel retiring for physical disability, and many members choose to delay their selection pending the results of medical treatment. Unfortunately," the Pentagon points out, "some retired members fail to survive the year of grace period."

The cost of the broader transportation rules would not exceed $220,000, the Defense Department has advised Congress.

Cat Develops Two New Tractor-Scrapers

With a heaped capacity of 35 cubic yards, the 482 Series C Scraper is teamed with the new Caterpillar 630 Series A Tractor. The 482C is considered best suited for special job conditions with good loading material and well packed, long hauls with little adverse grade. The new 630A Tractor features torque divider power shift transmission and an all new 420 maximum horsepower, six cylinder diesel engine.

WO new, 420 maximum horsepower wheel tractor-scraper, featuring an exclusive torque divider power shift transmission, have been announced by Caterpillar Tractor Co. The new machines are the four wheel 630 Series A and the two wheel 631 Series A.

Both tractors are powered by a completely new design, four-valve-in-head, diesel engine that has a maximum rating of 420 horsepower and a flywheel rating of 335 horsepower. The 630A has a top speed of 41 miles per hour and the 631A, 31 miles per hour. Other machine features include specially developed 28 ply 29.5 x 35 tires, "live" air actuated cable controls that reduce operator effort, advanced design steering systems for both units and a high degree of service accessibility.

Scrapers are of Lowbowl design and have a struck capacity of 21 cubic yards and a heaped capacity of 28 cubic yards. Refinements to the basic Lowbowl concept permit corner voids to be filled without staying excessively long in the cut.

For extra-large production capabilities under special job conditions, a new unit, the 630A-482C Tractor-Scraper combination, will be available. The new 482 Series C has a 35 cubic yard heaped capacity and 28 cubic yard struck. These units are designed specifically for easy loading material and long hauls without adverse grades.

A primary consideration in the design of the new tractor-scraper was the matched development of the torque divider power shift transmission with the new D343 Diesel Engine.

To "shift," the operator need only move the selector lever to one of three speed range positions. Within each range, the most appropriate of three "drives" is automatically selected to meet changing power requirements. The transmission combines planetary gear groups with a torque converter. The three automatically selected drives are: torque divider drive, direct drive and overdrive.

Torque divider drive is the first selected in each speed range, sending 25 per cent of engine torque through the converter and 75 per cent directly to the power train. As travel speed increases, the unit shifts to direct drive and then to overdrive.

A dash-mounted indicator shows the operator when to shift to the next higher speed range. The automatic shifts again take place in the next higher range. Unique feature of this arrangement is its utilization of high torque multiplication when power needs are greatest, then automatic shifting to the more efficient direct drive and overdrive as conditions permit.

In order to obtain maximum rimpull during loading, the range selector lever can be placed in a special loading range position. This holds the transmission in torque divider drive, and permits matching scraper speed to the pusher throughput loading.

Tower Men Need President's Help

eral to allow either foreign duty pay or sea duty pay for people assigned to Texas Tower duties or to island radar installations off the coast of California. The Comptroller had been told that since none of these locations had facilities for dependents the Air Force wished to continue its practice of allowing foreign duty pay and overseas service credit for such assignments.

The island installations in question were located on San Clemente, Santa Rosa and San Nicholas Islands off the Pacific Coast. Personnel at these stations serve 18-month tours without their families.

The Air Force agreed with Mr. Campbell last year that the Pacific Islands are part of the United States and thus warrant no special pay. But it urged reconsideration of overseas pay for Texas Tower personnel, who serve rotating 30-day shifts on the man-made islands in the Atlantic.

Mr. Campbell, in the new decision, refused to allow any special pay and insisted that since the towers were on the Continental Shelf they could not be considered as being "beyond the continental limits of the United States for pay purposes."

"In the absence of an authoritative court decision to the contrary," Mr. Campbell states, "it is concluded that the entitlement of enlisted persons to foreign duty pay during the period of their duty on Texas Towers, located on the outer Continental Shelf, is too doubtful to warrant our holding that payment of such pay is authorized."

"You may be advised, however," Mr. Campbell conceded, "that if the regulations relating to special pay for sea duty issued by the President pursuant to section 206 of the Career Compensation Act of 1949 . . . should be broadened to include in the definition of sea duty the type of duty performed on the Texas Towers, payment of the special pay here involved thereafter would be authorized."

Pay Boost Sought For Academy Professors

THE Pentagon has asked Congress to approve a pay boost for senior professors at West Point, and, eventually, for those at the U. S. Air Force Academy.

The proposal would boost the pay of colonels with 31 years' service from $985 per month to $1,065 per month. Upon completion of 36 years' services, the officers would receive another $80 per month increase.

Five different Boards of Visitors have recommended the pay change since 1955.

At present, a typical West Point professor serves at least 20 years in the grade of colonel and is retired in that grade at the age of 64. He receives his maximum monthly pay under present pay scales (985) at the age of 49. Thereafter, for the last 15 years of his service, his pay continues at the same rate.

No West Point professor can serve in general officer rank except the Dean of the Academic Board, who is a brigadier general.

Former Army Secretary Wilber M. Brucker, who sent the proposal to Congress, said "many outstanding officers have recently declined appointment as permanent professor because stagnation of pay and grade has become an increasingly important factor as the opportunities for advancement and challenging assignments elsewhere in the Army have increased."

The Military Academy is authorized 22 permanent professors, including the Dean of the Academic Board. Of those now assigned, four have over 31 years' service and six have over 36 years' service for pay purposes.

The Air Force Academy has no pressing need for the legislation at this time, but is included in the measure inasmuch as the legislation "may have application there in the future."

Army Aviation Award Goes To Collins Radio

A contract for $846,661 to deliver FD-105 Integrated Flight Systems (Army designation, AN/ASN-33) for use aboard Army aircraft has been awarded to Collins Radio Company, Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

Collins FD-105 Integrated Flight System is an electronic navigation/flight system which, through two panel-mounted instruments, provides a pilot with an instantaneous display of his position, his aircraft's three-dimensional attitude in the air and the control actions required to follow a selected course. The FD-105 replaces three to four instruments in older aircraft panels and improves the pilot's capabilities under marginal flying weather conditions.

$10.5 Billion Sought For Missiles, Ships, Aircraft In Authorization Bill

UNDER the Eisenhower Budget, which may be modified by President John F. Kennedy, the Pentagon is planning to spend $10.5 billion in new money on ships, missiles and aircraft during fiscal '62.

Skeletal details of the program have been outlined in a proposed authorization bill which the Defense Department has sent to Congress.

This year, for the first time, the House and Senate Armed Services Committees will assume the responsibility of writing authorizing legislation for the three major procurement programs of the Armed Forces. Funds cannot be appropriated until the authorization bill has been approved.

Already the new venture is embroiled in controversy. Former President Eisenhower has asked Congress to repeal the law setting up the new procedure. Defense Secretary McNamara has told the Senate Armed Services Committee that, although he is not sufficiently acquainted with the matter to speak with authority, he believes it is "appropriate" for the Armed Services Committees to write such legislation.

In presenting draft legislation to the Congress, outgoing Deputy Secretary of Defense James Douglas gave only the total funds breakdown for each service in each category. The draft proposal, including the enacting clause, is 14 lines long. Here is the breakdown as presented by the Defense Department:

| Aircraft | |
|-------------------|-----------------|
| Army | $ 193,700,000 |
| Navy-Marine Corps | $1,527,000,000 |
| Air Force | $3,197,000,000 |
| Missiles | |
| Army | $ 520,500,000 |
| Navy | $ 473,000,000 |
| USMC | $ 24,981,000 |
| Air Force | $2,811,000,000 |
| Naval Vessels | |
| Navy | $1,825,000,000 |

Set New Aerojet-General Sales Record

Sales and profits of Aerojet-General Corporation during the 1960 fiscal year surpassed all previous records of the company, Aerojet President Dan A. Kimball, former Secretary of the Navy, has announced.

Total sales of $425 million during fiscal 1960 reflect an increase of 17% over fiscal 1959 sales of $364 million. Profits before taxes totaled $21.1 million, an increase of 21% over the previous year's total of $17.4 million. Profits after taxes reached $10 million, a 23% increase over $8.2 million for 1959.

President Kimball said the company's year was marked by major milestones of achievement by its liquid fuel engines for the Titan ICBM and for the Ablestar, which became the first U. S. rocket propulsion system ever restarted in space on a flight which put the Transit satellite into orbit.

During the same period, the company delivered 6,000 operational solid rocket motors including those for the Polaris ballistic missiles aboard the operational nuclear powered submarines, George Washington and Patrick Henry.

At the company's Azusa plant the infrared system was developed which became the vital "eye" in the Midas reconnaissance satellite and development work was started on Snap 8, a system for nuclear auxiliary power.

Hallcrafters Receives Big Contract Increase For SAC B-52 Countermeasure Equipment

Executive Vice President Robert F. Halligan has reported that additional Air Force contracts totalling $37 million for electronic countermeasure equipment on B-52 bombers have been awarded the Hallcrafters Company, Chicago electronics firm.

The equipment designed to disrupt hostile radar and missile guidance systems, is for installation on SAC B-52s being produced by Boeing Wichita.

Breaking down the awards, Mr. Halligan announced receipt of $19.5 million on current countermeasure equipment contracts, as well as a new $17 million letter contract which will allocate initial funds for additional production of the same equipment.

He said the $19.5 million segment completes a total of $31.5 million countermeasure equipment contract, the initial $12 million of which was announced last April.

The additional $37 million in defense contracts brings Hallcrafters' current backlog to $53 million—a 435% increase over the figure a year ago at this time.

The contracts were received from the AMC Aeronautical Systems Center, Dayton, Ohio, and will be administered by the Chicago Air Procurement District, USAF, commanded by Col. James R. Ourand.

Mr. Halligan reported that the equipment is already being produced at the Hallcrafters facilities in Chicago and that more than 500 subcontractors, who come under the Government's Small Business Program, are being used.

Lockheed's $666 Million Tops List Of EDTR Defense Contracts For '60

The Pentagon this week released a list of 500 military prime contractors according to the net value of awards of $10,000 or more for experimental, developmental, test and research work (EDTR) during Fiscal Year 1960. The first list includes 400 business firms and 100 government agencies and non-profit institutions.

Lockheed Aircraft Corp. is first on the list, with $666 million, or 12.0% of the total. Lockheed was listed second in Fiscal Year 1959. Lockheed has system responsibility for the Polaris missile, and for Discoverer, Midas and Samos space vehicles.

General Dynamics Corps. is second (fourth in Fiscal Year 1959) with $528 million, or 9.5% of the total. Most of this is with Convair Division, which is the assembly prime contractor for the Atlas, Tartar and Terrier missiles.

North American Aviation, Inc., which was first in Fiscal Year 1959, is third on the Fiscal Year 1960 list with $474 million or 8.6% of the total. The company is engaged in experimental and developmental work on the X-15, F-108 and B-70 aircraft projects, and is responsible for assembly and testing of the Hound Dog Missile. In addition, its prime contracts include work on the Minute-man guidance system, Atlas and Thor propulsion systems, Saturn 1½ million pound thrust booster, and Polaris navigation equipment.

General Electric Co. ($397 million, or 7.2%) is in fourth place compared to third last year. Its prime contracts include work on the Atlas and Thor nose cones, Polaris submarine fire control system, and guidance equipment for Sidewinder, Talos and Tartar missiles. The company also is developing jet engines and working on the nuclear aircraft program.

In fifth place is Western Electric Co. ($270 million or 4.9%) which is prime contractor for the Nike series of missiles, and in sixth place is the Martin Co. ($246 million, or 4.4%), prime contractor for Titan, Bullpup, LaCrosse, Mace, Matador and Pershing missiles.

Of the 400 business firms appearing on the list, 136 or 34%, were small business firms. In addition to the 500 listed contractors, there were 1,339 business and non-profit concerns that received prime contract awards of $10,000 or more for EDTR work, making a total of 1,839 contractors in all. Of this total, 380 were government, non-profit or foreign organizations. The remaining 1,459 companies were U. S. business concerns, of which 577 were large firms and 882, or 60% were small firms.

The total net value of EDTR awards of $10,000 or more increased to $5,532 million in Fiscal Year 1960 from $5,209 million in the previous fiscal year. Contractors on the list of 500 in Fiscal Year 1960 accounted for $5,446 million, or 98.4% of the total, compared to 99.3% in Fiscal Year 1959.

The contractors with the largest value of awards are engaged in research, development, test or production of aircraft, guided missiles, nuclear submarines and other highly complex military materiel. In Fiscal Year 1960, 88% of all research, development and test awards of $10,000 or more to U. S. business firms was for work connected with guided missiles, aircraft, ships, and electronics programs.

Here are the top 75 firms and the value of the Fiscal '60 EDTR Contracts in thousands of dollars.

What Will Kennedy Administration Do About Strength In Europe?

From first page—

after the Inauguration.

In transmitting the fiscal plan to Congress last week, General Eisenhower had this to say about NATO:

"The evolutionary changes in warfare that have taken place over the last decade have had a profound effect on the military plans and programs of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. These plans are being reviewed and studied to take account of new weapons, better organization of the NATO military forces, and more direct channels of command to carry out NATO objectives effectively."

Declaring that "the NATO alliance remains vital to the security of the United States, no less than to the security of the other NATO allies," General Eisenhower said, "the United States will continue to contribute to the constructive and defensive tasks it has assumed."

Then he added that "some changes in U. S. force deployments may become advisable," and concluded by stating: "Nevertheless, the United States will continue to provide a fully effective strategic deterrent force and will contribute to the forward deployed forces of NATO."

The question before the Kennedy Administration is to determine (1) what constitutes a "fully effective strategic deterrent force," and (2) to what extent the U. S. forces in NATO should be capable of sustained combat in event of Communist aggression.

General George H. Decker, Army CofS, whose service includes duty as Deputy CinC of the U. S. European Command in Paris under General Lauris Norstad, will make a strong presentation in the highest councils of Government, as have his predecessors, including General Lyman L. Lemnitzer, JCS Chairman, that U. S. Army forces in NATO must be capable of defending the territory of Western Europe.

This means that they must be considerably more than a "trip wire," designed to provide the alarm signal of Communist attack.

General Decker will have powerful support.

General Norstad, who holds the twin commands of SACEUR and CinC of the U. S. European Command, repeatedly has called for an increase in the strength of NATO ground forces.

President Kennedy and Secretary of Defense McNamara have been advised that many NATO leaders are concerned that ground forces are at "dangerously low levels" and that any further reductions would jeopardize NATO's abilities to fulfill its missions.

General Norstad, who has said NATO should have 30 divisions, must rely principally on the Seventh Army force of 170,000 soldiers organized into five divisions, three armored cavalry regiments which patrol the Iron Curtain borders, an armor group of four battalions, and an antiaircraft artillery brigade.

In addition to the five ready-to-go U. S. divisions, General Norstad and his NATO commanders have 11 organized divisions in the Federal Republic of Germany, most of them as much as one-third below authorized strengths. These include 7 armored infantry, 2 armor, 1 mountain, and 1 airborne division. Another armored infantry division is being organized.

Total strength of the German Army is about 170,000.

Those who are alarmed over proposed cuts in the Seventh Army make the point that France, which has a commitment to NATO for four divisions, actually has only two battalions available. Holland and Belgium, which were to provide two divisions each, have not supplied these forces.

The British contribution to NATO, instead of four divisions, is five understrength infantry brigades and two armored brigades.

But the discussions that will take place in the next few weeks concerning U. S. strength in Europe will not be focused as sharply on the deficiencies of NATO participation by other Nations—although this will certainly be a factor roles and missions of the Seventh Army.

Those who counter the "trip wire" concept with its economy implications, maintain that NATO must have an adequate ground force, deployed as far forward as possible, capable of using nuclear or conventional weapons, which immediately could strike against Soviet and satellite forces in Germany and in the other Iron Curtain areas, as well as against Communist forces in the western part of the USSR in event of attack.

NATO and U. S. Army commanders say that such a "shield force," capable of defending Western Europe from the—as it will center on the concept of the threat of being overrun by Communist field armies, is vital to the "grand strategy" of the United States, which is to maintain collective strength to deter aggression and, if war comes, to assure the means for victory.

The change from the Eisenhower Administration to the Kennedy Administration and the consequent demand for a critical budget review of U. S. deployments in Europe provide the setting for fateful decisions on two possible courses of action:

(1) Reduce the strength of the Seventh Army in Europe, possibly by "skeletonizing" some of its units, and thereby relegate it to a "trip wire" status. Such a decision would recognize, of course, the drastic effect this would have on the morale of our Allies, notably in West Germany.

(2) Maintain the present Seventh Army strength, improving its combat capabilities with a weapon modernization program, and thereby assuring that its "trip wire" mission is buttressed by the capability to defend the territory of Western Europe on the battlefield. Such a decision would heed the military appeals of General Norstad to strengthen the NATO "Shield." On the political front, this would fortify the "grand strategy" for collective security.

Members of the Armed Forces, be on the ALERT!

Special March issue of SIGNAL analyzes Air Force, is a must for all concerned with national defense

High over hostile territory, a satellite blinks an eye, observing a missile blast-off. In the United States, alarms ring, rockets are readied, men scramble for planes. In seconds, a giant system swings into action, with the Air Force out front, for defense and for instant retaliation.

How good the Air Force is, how great the job it does, will depend largely on the minds and hearts of men; but equally important will be the role of communications-electronics. Will we be warned in time? A second's delay could bring death and disaster.

What you need to know and to do

The March special issue of Signal will reveal, for the first time in years, the whole story of Air Force telecommunications. Among other matters, it will deal with the capabilities of defense networks such as SACCOMNET, AIROPNET, COMLOGNET, and analyze the arrangements made for SAC emergency communications.

Thousands of highly-placed military and civilian defense personnel will read and debate this special issue. Make sure that you don't miss out on it; it's important that you should know the facts! Fill in and mail this coupon today to make sure of your copy.

Pentagon USCOA Legislation Will Encounter Protests From Board Of Actuaries; Fund In Trouble, Plan To Liberalize Annuity Benefits Faces Formidable Challenge

From first page—annuity coverage, but benefits of the plan would be paid only if they died from non-Service connected causes. Under the latter program, Service families would be assured of benefits under either the Survivor Benefits Act or USCOA.

Other changes in the program which will be proposed by the Defense Department provide that:

- Members with 18 or more years of service, who are now barred from making a USCOA election, may make such an election that will be effective only if retirement occurs at least three years after the date of the election.

- If a Service member retires for disability with less than 18 years service, his USCOA election will not take effect.

- Changes and revocations become effective after three years, instead of after five years under the present law. Revocation would not bar a member from future participation in the program, provided he meets the requirements for the plan at a later date.

- Withdrawal from the program would be permitted in cases of financial hardship, but with no refund of deductions already made from the retired member's pay.

The Board of Actuaries have proposed a counter plan under which a minimum of 20 years' service would be required for USCOA eligibility, so-called "death bed" retirements would be eliminated, and a five year waiting period would be enforced before any annuity plan elections could become valid. The actuaries say they would be willing to compromise with the Defense Department and allow only a three-year waiting period.

Late last year the Actuaries told the President that "the draft bill of the Department of Defense would completely change the nature of the system by introducing an alternative program of partial coverage under which there would be no USCOA survivor annuities awarded if benefits were payable under the Dependency and Indemnity Compensation Program."

Confusion Feared

They also said that under the DoD bill, there "would be confusion, misinformation, and disappointment on the part of survivors in the case of service-connected deaths because of lack of coverage" and that the "administration would be complicated by the multiplicity of choices, as well as by the delay involved in obtaining decision from the Veterans Administration as to whether deaths are service-connected."

The Actuaries said that their recommendations "limiting the effectiveness of the options to those with 20 or more years of service at the time of retirement would be more restrictive than the present basis. We are convinced that such a change is necessary to effectuate the principle of an actuarially-equivalent system."

"Our analysis indicates that the mortality experience among disability retirants with less than 20 years of service has been extremely unfavorable to the program, with the actual mortality being many times greater than the tabular rates according to the table used in developing the reduction factors," they said.

The Actuaries continue: "In the great majority of cases, the survivors of disability retirants with less than 20 years of service will receive benefits under the provisions of the Servicemen's and Veterans' Survivor Benefits Act (Public Law 84-881), which were not available when the Uniformed Services Contingency Option Act of 1953 was first under consideration. . . . It is our belief that the opportunity to make an election under the Uniformed Services Contingency Option Act is no longer necessary for this group."

Transition Proposals

The following transitional provisions have been proposed by the Board of Actuaries for implementation of their new plan:

For those with 18 or more years of service—continued coverage for those already signed up for the plan, regardless of the date of retirement and a five-year waiting period before elections become effective for those who have not signed up on the effective date of the proposed legislative changes.

For those with 15 to 17 years of service—continued coverage regardless of date of retirement if already signed up and elections effective for those who sign up for USCOA within six months after the changes are enacted, regardless of date of retirement.

For those with less than 15 years service USCOA elections would be effective only after 20 years' service.

The U. S. Army's 14th Infantry Regiment, shown in action during the Boxer Rebellion, Peking, China, 1900. The regiment was pinned against the Chinese City Wall near Tung Pien Gate when Trumpeter Calvin P. Titus, E Company, later awarded the Medal of Honor, led volunteers up the perilous ascent that gained the victory and raised the American flag. "I'll try, sir," were his words—deeply engraved in the annals of American arms—when he was the first to answer the call for volunteers.

...in the finest tradition of service

Wherever the nation's people, principles or pledges are threatened—there lies the duty of U. S. servicemen. At all times theirs has been a tradition of heroism among heroes, regarding their assignments as calling for sacrifices above and beyond the call of duty: "I'll try, sir!"

The founders of Federal Services and many of our present staff have worn the uniform of the armed services. Today, we are in the business of financing for servicemen who share this magnificent tradition. We must honor their devotion by directing our dedication to levels above and beyond the call of duty.
